

Heaven were a pair of lights

Marching slowly toward you at midnight
I saw it had taken mechanical form That pleasure was heavy metal and gone
Then I felt myself reborn With the great flooding of iron in my mouth
What I had kissed I didn't know What I had missed I forgot to remember But drew it from flesh it did That reminder of life so simple the fight I        reneged on my promise to nature and God selfishly begged for vaster sights this I am owed, said, in shivers fearing that great white in the night